Anglia Ruskin
University

We're the right choice

Anglia Ruskin University is one of the largest universities in the east of England. We work closely with leading international organisations to ensure you graduate not just with a world-class education, but with the tangible skills to pursue your dream career.

We're based in Cambridge & Chelmsford

Cambridge is a vibrant, historic, home of academia, Cambridge is where Anglia Ruskin University first emerged in 1858 as the Cambridge School of Art, which still exists as part of our university today. With a theatre and art gallery on campus, and the bustling city all around you, you will get a real experience of life in England as you undertake your studies.

Chelmsford is a large, modern campus in a fast-growing city. It has the best to offer in British culture, with annual music and beer festivals, the county cricket ground and easy links to the English seaside. Best of all, the centre of London is only a short train ride away, ideal for exploring and avoiding the high living costs.

Be anything, do everything
with our five faculties:

Arts, Law and Social Sciences
Health, Social Care and Education
Lord Ashcroft International Business School

Organizations

As the majority of UK universities are publicly funded, central government policy has a significant influence on the environment in which they operate, and the standards and targets they have to meet. Aside from central government, there are a variety of organizations designed to support, regulate and fund institutions, as well as the institutions themselves. Some are government departments, others are formed by institutional membership. From quality of teaching through to the reporting of statistical data that is publicly available, the organizations below are some of those involved in UK Higher Education.

Academic culture

UK degrees are designed to encourage students to develop independence and individuality. Great emphasis is placed on the value of self expression and originality, and students are encouraged to develop their own opinions early on in their degree program.

Students will engage in practical work as well as learning factual and theoretical data. Both are important foundations for all degree programs and students are encouraged to develop a critical approach alongside their own perspective. UK Universities help students to understand the context of the subject they are learning.

Students are encouraged to take the initiative and develop independent research and study. Help is available for students who need it or ask for it through tutors and support staff.

All students find the transition from high school to university challenging, and some will adapt more easily than others. International students sometimes have to face different cultural as well as academic challenges, and UK institutions have developed a supportive environment for international students through dedicated international student support officers and tutors.

Study methods in the UK

Lectures are typically larger classes that last around one hour where a lecturer/tutor will guide students through the course material by explaining the main points. Lecture sizes vary significantly. A large lecture would typically have 150 students, with more average lectures having 60 students.

Seminars are smaller classes where a tutor and students can discuss a topic to encourage a debate. As the class sizes are smaller in the UK, there is often little distinction between a seminar and a lecture.

Tutorials are meetings between a tutor and an individual/small group of students to give more focused guidance on a student's past, present and future work.

Practical work is intended to give practical experiences of the theories learnt in other classes and to develop practical skills.

Workplace in a work environment under the supervision of a professional.

Independent learning and group study is required by courses and will require students to work on their own and in small groups to produce work for class.

Seeking help Students are encouraged to go to their lecturers if they need help with a course. Most lecturers have dedicated hours each week set aside to see students and many also operate open-door policies.

Settling in

Most universities will host a welcome event for international students and Freshers' week to welcome new students.

Students are suggested to join clubs and societies to meet friends and to make the transition easier.

Students' Union

Students' Unions are typically housed in their own buildings and have social areas, shops, places to eat and drink and event spaces. Many have banks, hairdressers and travel agents.

Students' Unions also offer support in areas such as finance, accommodation, disability and more.

Most Students' Unions in the UK are represented by the National Union of Students (NUS): www.nus.org.uk

Leadership opportunities

It is also important to help students to look beyond the degree when choosing university and into what student life and leadership opportunities they may have, such as:

Becoming a student representative for their program of study or accommodation unit.

Running for office in clubs and societies, and the Students' and Athletics Unions.

Volunteering in the local area through the Students' Unions.

The admissions cycle

Admissions requirements	24
UCAS deadlines	25
UCAS application	27
Making an application	28

Admissions cycle

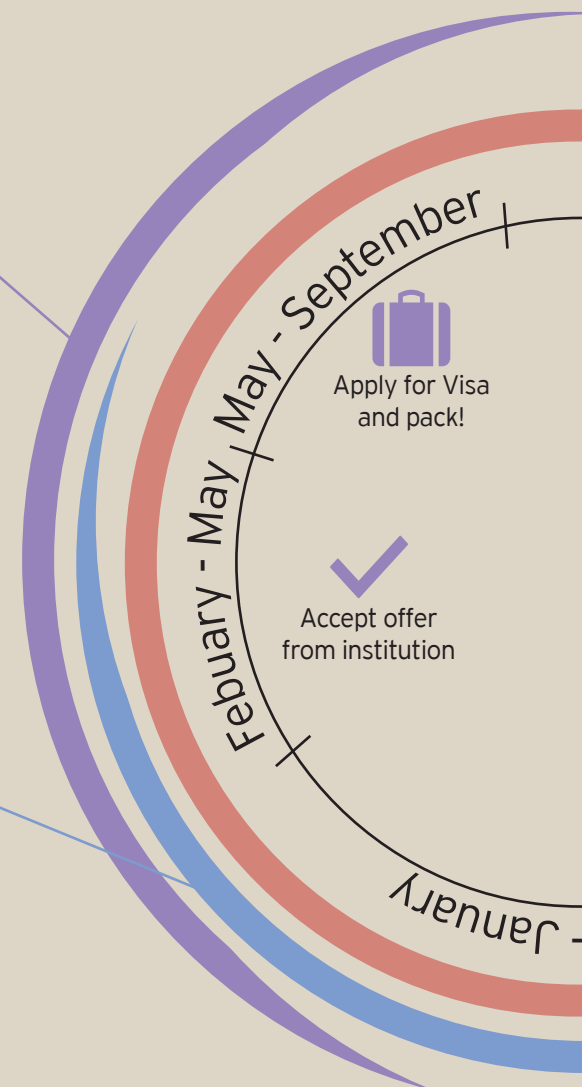

Role of the institution

- Universities set admissions requirements and provide comprehensive information via UCAS and their websites to help students research their options. As students narrow their options they can speak to an admissions advisor to learn more about the program.
- Universities receive applications electronically from UCAS to review and make an admissions decision.
- Academic staff may carry out an interview with students who have applied (this often depends on the subject of study)
- Universities confirm the places with students once exam results are confirmed
- Universities provide applicants with accommodation, enrollment and induction information

Role of High School

- High school will need to support the student with their application by helping the student to understand the process
- They will need to write a reference or provide information about a student's predicted exam results
- Most UK Universities have teams of admissions advisers who are able to help counselors to advise their students, and will have information material that they can send to you to help decision making

18 months before enrolment

Role of the student

Pre-Application

- Students need to ensure that they have fully researched their options and know which courses they would like to apply for

Application

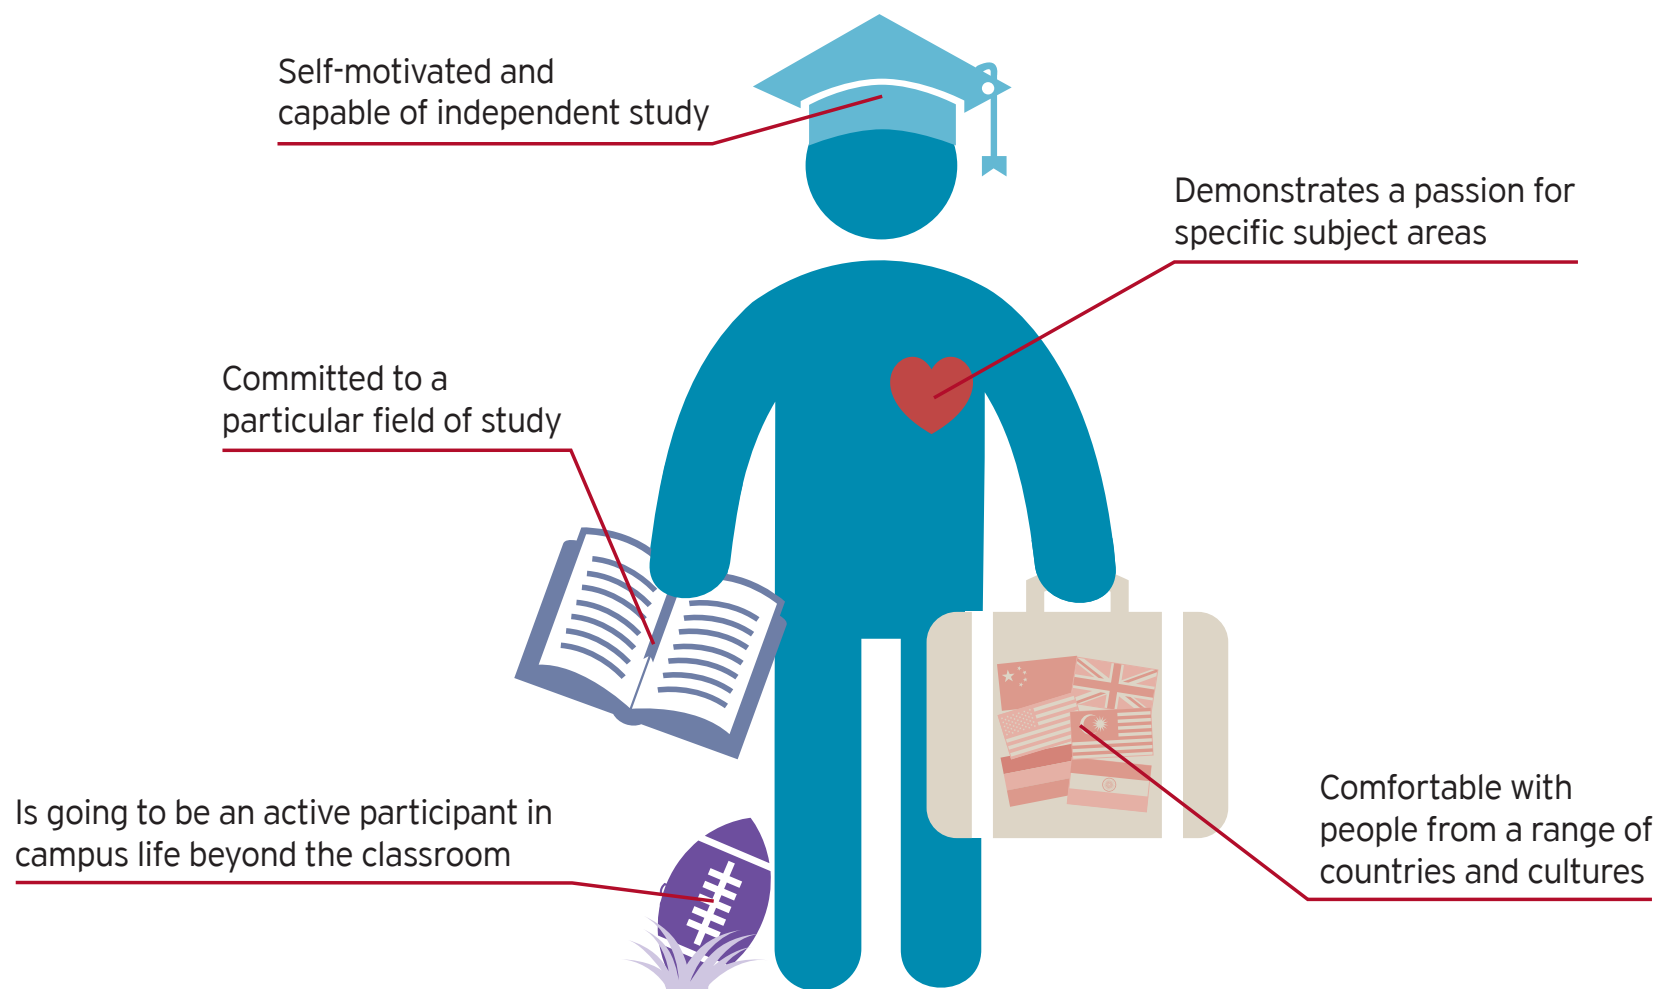

- Students will need to complete the application form, including their personal statement which should include information about why they want to study their chosen subject area
- Students will need to attend interviews if requested by the university
- Students in the UK often attend university open days or UCAS conventions to decide whether they like an institution, some universities offer virtual tours on their website for international students
- Students will need to communicate with the university if they have any questions about their application, rules around personal data in the UK mean that an institution won't be able to discuss their application with anyone else
- Students will need to ensure that they have all of the relevant certificates and exam results requested by the university
- Students may need to confirm their place if they have an offer before their exam results are available

Pre-Arrival

- Students will need to ensure that all relevant documents are supplied with their application, which may be visas, portfolio pieces and finance documentation

A good fit student

Studying in the UK gives students access to world leading academics and facilities in an international learning environment. Most British universities boast on-time graduation rates of over 90% with equally impressive progression rates into further study or employment within six months. The British model emphasizes independent scholarship and critical thinking. Students enter into a focused program of study and the majority of their classes will be directly relevant to their chosen major. Students progress through their program with peers who share their interests. They will be able to immerse themselves in a subject, studying a broad range of areas within their specialism. The admissions process reflects the focused nature of the UK's education model and therefore the approach is similar to a graduate application in Canada.

Choosing a major

Students apply to a specific degree program at a university when they apply. It is important that they take a considered and well-researched approach when making their application

Some of the factors that students need to consider include:

Subject choice checklist

- ☐ What career would you like to enter when you graduate?
- ☐ Do you need any special, industry qualifications?
- ☐ Do you need a masters degree?
- ☐ What high school qualifications do you have?
- ☐ Is it a competitive area and do you have the right subject mix from high school?
- ☐ Are there any specialist institutions that you have heard about?

What subjects are you interested in?
What subjects are you interested in and what are you most passionate about?

What careers are you interested in and what skills are needed?

What are the modules like? Which are the most interesting or relevant to your career direction?

Who are the Lecturers? Are they experts in areas you are interested in?

Admissions requirements

Students are admitted via a holistic application process that reviews students readiness for their chosen major and university life.

Student applications are typically assessed in the following areas:

- ☐ Academic proficiency based on their qualifications and credentials to date
- ☐ English proficiency based on performance in recognised assessment tests such as IELTS
- ☐ Demonstrated interest through the personal statement
- ☐ Academic reference

Depending on institution or programme, additional requirements may include:

- Interviews
- Portfolio of work or audition
- Additional testing

Remember: in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, students will need to demonstrate a readiness to transition into a 13+3 year education system.

Academic requirements typically include

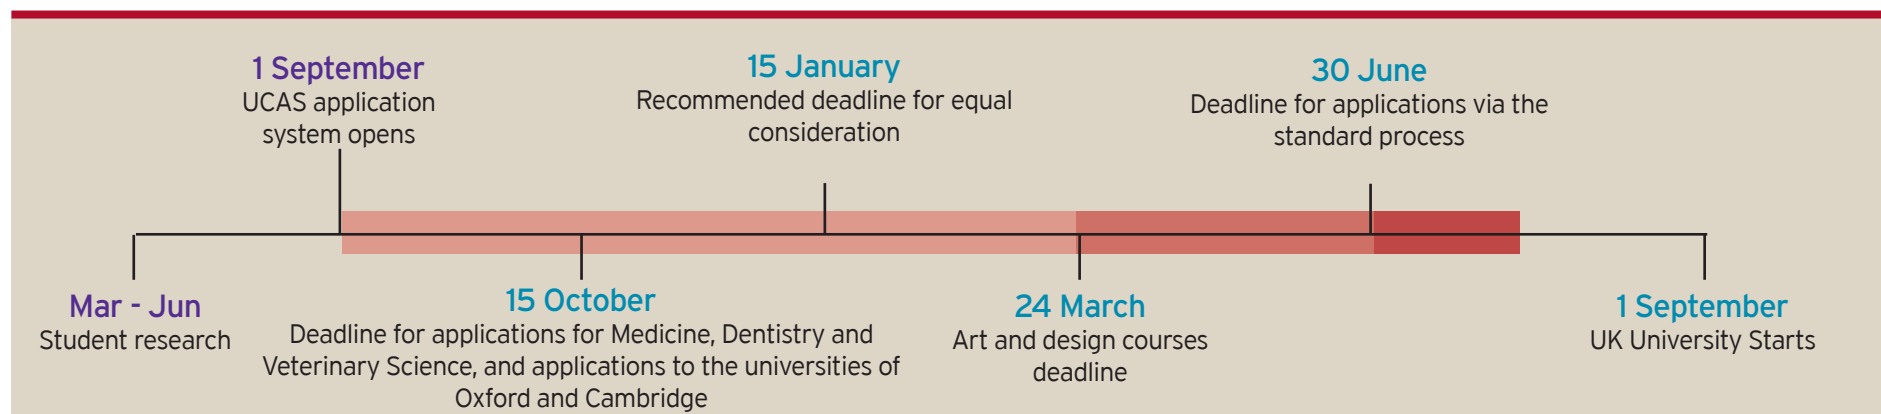

- High school diploma
- Advanced Placement (AP), IB

Academic references should include

- Qualities of the student
- School information, particularly on curriculum
- Provide context to results and students chosen classes
- Grade predictions
- School profile (sent separately)

UCAS deadlines

Students are recommended to apply as early as possible at www.ucas.com/apply.

Students can apply to up to a maximum of 5 choices.
Application fee for up to 5 choices is £23.
Application fee for 1 choice is £12.

Deadlines Explained

1 September - Students can submit applications after this date. Students can apply in the current application cycle even if they intend to take a gap year.

15 October - Equal consideration deadline for applications for all professional medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine and veterinary science courses, and for all courses at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

15 January - Equal consideration deadline for applications for all courses except those with 15 October or 24 March deadlines.

24 March - Equal consideration deadline for applications for art and design courses except those listed with a 15 January deadline.

Additional application routes

UCAS Extra

Students who have not been accepted onto a place or have declined all their offers can use UCAS Extra to make one more application. This service is open between 25 February - 3 July.

Clearing

Clearing is a service that opens at the end of the application cycle. It matches students who do not hold an offer with any unfilled university places. Clearing places typically fill up in the last two weeks of August as this is when most UK applicants receive their exam results. Clearing opens in July and closes on the 30 September.

UCAS application

Students have five sections to complete:

UCAS

- ☐ Personal details
- ☐ Choices: 5 courses maximum
No preference order. Universities and colleges do not see the other choices.
- ☐ Education:
List current & pending qualifications.
- ☐ Employment:
Include relevant paid work experience.
- ☐ Personal statement:
Academic focus, show enthusiasm for subject matter

Schools have one section to complete:

- ☐ References:
Discuss academic ability and interests of student, tailor reference to reflect intended course, predict grades.

Making an application

Completing and tracking

Once all six sections are complete and the student has paid the one time application fee, it can be submitted to UCAS.

Note that UK universities do not see the names on each application. Each application is read blind which is why grades play such an important part in the decision process.

'Nominated access'

- Recommended that each student nominates a teacher, parent or both as an alternative contact.
- The nominated person(s) can contact UCAS on the student's behalf to discuss the application.
- UCAS advisers will not discuss an application with anyone other than the student or their nominated contact.

Student/Adviser Track

- Online system offered by UCAS
- Grants access to status updates of the student's application through decisions, offers, replies, and results stages.

73% of US and Canadian employers consider a degree earned in the UK as equal to or better than those earned in North America.

Personal statement

When writing a personal statement, it may include:

- ☐ Why are you applying to university?
- ☐ Why are you interested in the subject?
- ☐ What do you want to do when you graduate?
- ☐ How can you demonstrate your readiness for university?
- ☐ What skills, knowledge, achievements and experience do you have that are relevant to your chosen major?
- ☐ Why are you applying to the UK?
- ☐ What can you bring to university life?

This is the only part of the application in which the student has complete control.

For more information on how to help guide your students to writing their personal statement, please visit www.ucas.com/personalstatement.

Predicted grades

Schools provide predicted grades as part of the application process.

Predicted grades play a strong role in whether a student is given a conditional offer or not.

School teachers should predict a grade based on their professional judgment, the student's past performance and current progress, the school's historical performance.

Universities appreciate that grade predictions are an imperfect science!

Reference

When writing a reference it may include:

- ☐ Include information on the student's academic achievements since the age of 16.
- ☐ Comment on their suitability for university and the program.
- ☐ Highlight any achievements, skills, experiences or personal qualities that are relevant.
- ☐ Provide context of the student's high school course load.
- ☐ Mention any personal factors that may have influenced their academic performance as relevant to the application.

Offers

An institutions makes one of four decisions:

- Unconditional offer: Accepted
- Conditional offer: Applicant will be accepted if they meet criteria as stated by institution
- Unsuccessful: not accepted
- A University may also offer to place a student on an alternative course.

Conditional offer example:

if a student is taking two AP classes, the university may require 3 in each class. If the student successfully gets over a 3, they are guaranteed acceptance into the institution.

Acceptance

Students must decide which offer to accept once they have received decisions from all of the institutions. A student can respond in three ways to their offers:

- Firm acceptance: their first choice
- Insurance acceptance: acts as a back-up (optional)
- Decline the offer

University accommodation

Most universities provide accommodation for single and unaccompanied married international students through its accommodation office. Students may be placed in a hall of residence or a shared house or apartment. Each student will be given a bed, desk, and book shelves. They will have access to common areas like a kitchen and bathroom. Students can choose en-suite accommodation.

If your student's course lasts longer than a year, they may be able stay in the hall for subsequent years. Students typically move into private accommodation in their second year and are supported in the search by their accommodation office.

Spaces are limited, so it's important that students apply as soon as possible. Many institutions offer guarantees to first year and international students.

Practical advice

UK universities have special offices set up to support students in finding the right accommodation. Their staff will help to guide students through the process as part of applying and preparing for UK study.

To ensure that a student has a place to live they will need to apply as soon as possible

- ☐ Fully complete any accommodation forms and return them before the deadline date
- ☐ Students should confirm accommodation arrangements with the accommodation office prior to arriving in the UK

University accommodation in the UK is single occupancy - no roommates!

Private accommodation

The accommodation office at your student's university may be able to assist with finding private accommodation

When deciding on renting, your student should consider costs of utilities as well as the actual rental amount. In the UK they will need to think about:

- ☐ TV licence
- ☐ Insurance for their belongings - usually called contents insurance
- ☐ Water, electricity and gas bills
- ☐ Telephone connection
- ☐ Internet connection
- ☐ Council tax exemption - UK households typically pay council tax for local services. Full-time students are exempt from this fee but must notify the local council.

Find out more information at www.gov.uk

Home stay

Home stay is when a student lives with a UK family in their home. It is a great way for students to immerse themselves into the culture of a country and explore UK culture and everyday life first hand.

Home stay can be arranged through the university.

Most University accommodation in the UK is Self-catered

Tuition Fee Status

- International students pay different tuition fees than home students.
- International students tuition fees vary significantly between university, course and academic level.
- Tuition fee status is classified based on permanent residence, not citizenship.
- EU students temporarily resident in the United States may be eligible for home tuition fees and loans (visit www.ukcisa.org to find out more).

Financial Aid

Canadian students may be able to receive loans from their provincial government. Students should check with their province/territory's Ministry of Education branch for details. Certain UK universities qualify for the Canada Student Loans Program. The list can be found here: www.canlearn.ca/eng/tools/designated/index.shtml

Top-tip: students should check whether their tuition fees (and any scholarships) are fixed for the duration of their studies or apply to their first year only.

Working while you study

International students can typically work up to 20 hours per week during term time and full-time during vacation periods on a Tier 4 (General) Student Visa. Some degree programs offer paid internships as part of the course, and most Students' Unions have a JobShop helping students find part-time jobs. Students can work on-campus and off-campus. Students will need to apply for a national insurance number during orientation.

From 1st October 2014 the minimum wage in the UK is:

- Age 18-20 £5.13 ($8.50)
- Age 21+ £6.50 ($10.55)

Many UK universities offer work placements as part of their degree programs. These are often incorporated into students regular course load and students will usually be paid for placements over four weeks in duration.

International students can participate in term-time work placements and receive an income. Many programs allow students to work a year in industry as part of their program. Students receive a salary for these positions. Work is full-time and international students can participate on a student visa.

Pre-departure

Once your student has been accepted to a course, ensure he/she has the following

- The required documents for travel (i.e. valid passport, visa, airline ticket, etc).
- Organized finances.
- Accommodation for when he/she arrives.
- Travel and health insurance.
- Bring any certificates or transcripts pertaining to qualifications stated during the admissions process.

More pre-departure, accommodation, working and other useful information can be found at:

www.educationuk.org/canada

Students should also check with their chosen university for further pre-departure information as there may be additional university processes they need to complete to ensure a smooth enrollment.

Medical

Your student should have a physical exam at least four weeks prior to departure.

Medical cost in the UK

- If your student's course is 6 months or longer or in Scotland, he/she can get treatment from the British National Health Service (NHS).
- Students will have access to free doctor's examinations and hospital treatment under the NHS.
- Student should register with a doctor as a NHS patient with his/her passport and enrolment letter as proof of UK address.
- Your student's university is likely to have its own medical center and the student support services team can also help them with how to register with a doctor.

Packing

Weather in the UK is famously changeable, students should pack warm top coat, hat, scarf, gloves and an umbrella.

Like the Canada, the UK has strict laws on foodstuffs that can be brought into the UK, so if a student wants to bring foods they need to check that they are not on the list of prohibited items. More information can be found here:

www.gov.uk/bringing-food-animals-plants-into-uk/food

Students will need to have the following documents for travel:

- ☐ Valid passport that will not expire while he/she is abroad with a visa
- ☐ Airline ticket
- ☐ Letter of acceptance from university
- ☐ Evidence stating student has enough funding for his/her study and accommodation
- ☐ Insurance document
- ☐ Some British currency
- ☐ Prescription medicine
- ☐ Address, telephone number and travel instruction to student's final destination

Sports and student athletes

For some students, sport plays a significant role in university life as it provides the opportunity to engage in inter-university tournaments and sports clubs that are run and managed by students and institutions. UK universities have a history of providing a nominated day per week for sport, to enable students to fit it into their studies. Most universities have on-campus sports facilities, including gym and track and field spaces.

As well as official sports clubs run by the institution, there are often societies that are formed by students through the students' union representing sports from ice hockey to tae kwon do and everything in between. If students play a sport that is not represented, they are able to start their own society and during the first few weeks of term, there is usually a sports and societies week that enables students to find a society that they would like to join and students can join more than one!

Universities have strong links with the community and across the UK are leisure and professional sports clubs who welcome new members. Local clubs are usually friendly and small membership fees may apply depending on the sport. If students wish to join a sports club or private gym, they should always check whether there is a student discount.

British Universities & Colleges Sport (BUCS), the national governing body for Higher Education sports in the UK, covers 16 official sports.

Find out more at www.bucs.org.uk

Most universities in the UK do not offer tuition scholarships on the basis of athletic ability. However, many UK universities offer scholarships for elite athletes to enable them to excel in their sport while in higher education. These scholarships vary in value and cover costs such as equipment, physiotherapy, specialist coaching and related travel.

Religious observance in UK universities

The UK has a multicultural society and British universities recruit students from around the world. As such, UK universities are home to students of multiple faiths and support students in the observance of different religions and beliefs. The UK is officially a Christian country and observes religious holidays based on the Christian calendar. However, with a significant population who practice other faiths, there are celebrations and observance days for a wide range of religions in the UK.

Many British universities have officially designated representatives across multiple faiths and religions who are able to introduce students to their local community.

Generally, UK universities avoid scheduling compulsory activities during religious holidays for students whose commitment to the observance of their faith would otherwise cause them to miss the assessment or other activity. University policies offer flexibility to students if observance of a religious holiday prevents a student from attending class or completing an assignment if discussed with a lecturer in advance.

Students with disabilities

British universities provide excellent support facilities for students who have disabilities and offer additional tailored support for students who need it. While all UK universities offer strong services in this area there are variations in the level of support offered to meet particular needs. Students should contact the disability support office on campus early in the application process to ensure that the university has the resources and capabilities to meet students' needs.

The Disability Discrimination Act of 1995 prohibits education and training providers to discriminate against disabled people. Universities are required to make reasonable adjustments to serve disabled students so they are not at a substantial disadvantage.

There is limited funding for international disabled students, but sponsors may have additional grants to cover extra expenses a student may have due to his/her disability.

It's useful to speak to individual institutions about services and support available for students with disabilities as it differs from every institution.

LGBT culture in the UK

UK Universities are inclusive organisations who do not discriminate on the grounds of sexual orientation or gender identity and there is a LGBT community in most UK universities. Some institutions offer support groups and host events for their LGBT communities.

There are a number of laws in the UK that prohibit discrimination on the basis of gender identity or sexual orientation and universities must comply with that law.

The UK has a thriving LGBT community and there are national and local events as well as a range of specialist publications that cover LGBT news. Some useful resources include:

PinkNews

covers LGBT events in the UK and provides an LGBT guide to the UK.

Stonewall

a LGBT charity in the UK, offers political and legal information about LGBT issues in the UK.

Here are some of the league tables that are popular in the UK:

The Times Higher Education

The Guardian

What are league tables?

Many newspapers publish university and subject league tables (or rankings) that allow you to search for and compare data and information on university and colleges from across the UK. University rankings give an indication of a universities overall strengths while subject rankings provide an indication of the strengths of a university in a student's chosen major. Given the focused nature of the UK system, subject rankings are the most relevant.

Official league tables are published by The Guardian, Times Higher Education, The Times and The Sunday Times, and the Complete University Guide, among others, based on comparable information. Each source calculates its rankings with different criteria and methodology that are explained on their website.

Keep in mind

League tables should not be used in isolation but are a good source to help students start researching their university options.

League tables are helpful indications of what previous students thought about a course, costs, kinds of jobs or further study which student went on to do after completing their course. Each course and university will be different for everyone.

Some information is retrospective so be careful to check which year the data refers to. When comparing data for courses, care should be taken where the differences between courses are small. Take note of number of respondents to the survey for each course.

Student life

We have campuses in both Cambridge and Chelmsford. Cambridge is a vibrant, historic, home of academia. With a theatre and art gallery on campus, and the bustling city all around you, you will get a real experience of life in England as you undertake your studies.

Chelmsford has the best to offer in British culture, with annual music and beer festivals, the county cricket ground and easy links to the English seaside. Best of all, the centre of London is only a short train ride away, ideal for exploring and avoiding the high living costs. Chelmsford is also close to two regional airports, acting as gateways to wider Europe.

The Student's Union is active on both campuses, and you will be able to take part in many of the societies at Anglia Ruskin, whether you want sport (American Football, Fencing or Judo), subject (Law, Engineering, Film and Arts), cultural (Afro-Caribbean, International, Islamic) or another interest (Amnesty International, Music or even Harry Potter); you will find new friends and new experiences.

Student life

Dundee is big enough to have a great buzz about it (both on and off campus), yet small enough to be friendly and accessible. Many describe it as 'Scotland's student city' due to its large student population. Everything you need can be found on campus, although the attractions of the city - including a vibrant music scene, galleries, cinemas and theatre - are only a few minutes away.

We have also invested £200 million into developing our campus over the last 5 years including award-winning redevelopments to the accommodation, high quality teaching facilities, and major extensions to the library and Institute of Sport & Exercise. University of Dundee has been ranked 1st for Student Experience in Scotland for the past 4 years!

Student life

London Metropolitan University offer an international study experience in the heart of London. The University is located in some of the most exciting areas of the city: Aldgate, Moorgate and Holloway.

London Met offers a wide range of support services for students including accommodation, money matters, careers advice, counselling and immigration advice.

Social life at the University revolves around our fantastic Rocket Complex at the Holloway Hub, hosting a range of events, including club night, movie nights and charity events. With pool tables, plasma screens, a PS3, great sound-system and a courtyard garden, it's also a great place to chill out when not in lectures.

The University has excellent sports facilities including gyms at Holloway Hub and Aldgate Hub with state-of-the-art cardio vascular equipment; a full-sized basketball court complete with scoreboard; dance studio; and fitness studio. Football, cheerleading, basketball, squash, cricket, tennis and hockey are just a few of the sports in which you can participate at London Met.

London Met Students' Union is a democratic organisation which voices the views and concerns of our students on a range of issues relating to the University and the wider community. Each and every student has the opportunity to stand and be elected.

There are also many ways to get involved with university life at London Met. Get involved by offering your services as a journalist, graphic designer, DJ, researcher or technical assistant at our student magazine or radio station. There is a whole range of societies on offer at London Met, but if none of these catch your eye, it's always possible to set up your own.

Ravensbourne Students' Union (RSU) is here to ensure that students have the best academic and social experience at Ravensbourne. The RSU runs a number of clubs and societies and organises regular events to put fun in student life. When new students arrive at Ravensbourne they start with the Freshers Week - five days and nights of social and induction activities to help them settle into life at Ravensbourne. Then there is a Freshers Fayre, a day full of activities, opportunities, interactions and student discounts. Students make new friends, learn everything they need to know before they start their studies and have lots of fun in the process! Student can expect plenty of events throughout the year, linked to campaigns such as Go Green Week, Fairtrade Fortnight, Children in Need, Sports Relief and Mental Health Day. Events take place both on and off campus. The O2 is often used as a venue, and students are eligible for discounts at shops, restaurants and bars there, including the Brooklyn Bowl and Slug and Lettuce.

Our campus is small enough to create a community feel to it, but large enough to have most facilities on-site, except the university farms. The RAU offers students a range of clubs and societies from soccer to equestrian clubs and choir to international student societies. We are well located to students to become involved in countryside activities, but within easy reach of larger cities.

A World First in Higher Education, UCFB delivers undergraduate degrees and executive education in the administrative, management and operational business facets of the global multi-billion pound football and sports industries.

The UCFB Wembley teaching facilities overlook the pitch within the famous Wembley Stadium in London, UK, which is the 'chemistry lab' for students, allowing them to live, learn and work within the machinery of the sports industry. The global and iconic Wembley Stadium environment provides students with an inspirational and motivational environment for their studies. Walking up Wembley Way every day to the spiritual home of English football and sport is truly an inspirational experience. The UCFB Wembley facilities reflect the excellence of the Stadium, with lecture theatres, seminar rooms, quiet study areas, library and media suites, overlooking the field of play.

Each individual student at UCFB has the opportunity to study a traditional academic subject within the context of an industry for which they have a genuine passion and interest. This is accompanied by the opportunity for work experience with Wembley Stadium and their corporate partners. Key Wembley staff form part of UCFB's Executive Speaker programme, providing valuable insights and enabling them to network and promote themselves for future career opportunities.

The University of Westminster is a diverse and dynamic university situated in the heart of London, providing a vibrant learning environment and commitment to educating for professional life. London is one of the world's most exciting cities and we are at the center of it. From business and finance to fashion, art, music, cinema and sport, London is where things tend to happen first. Studying at Westminster means that your classroom goes well beyond the walls of the University and everything that London has to offer is on your doorstep.

We are also proud to have very strong links with industry and professional organizations in London and across the UK, making sure that our courses are professionally relevant and offering students extensive placement and internship opportunities in leading businesses in their chosen sectors. In addition, there are plenty of opportunities to get involved with extra-curricular events and activities throughout the year, including a vast range of sports clubs such as basketball, American football and cheerleading, and more than 70 societies, ranging from ice skating and model United Nations to law and entrepreneurship. Wherever you come from, Westminster offers a distinctly British learning experience within a truly international environment.

This image shows a full page of blank, lined paper. It features approximately 20 evenly spaced horizontal grey lines across its entire width, typical of notebook or legal stationery. The paper itself is a clean, off-white color, and there are no margins, text, or other markings present.
